MURDER DEAD AT SALEM

BIG FIRE DEATH LIST IS FEARED

Not less than 225 persons were reported still missing in Salem today, following the great fire. Today a search was begun in the cooled ruins for the bodies of the dead.

The authorities fear that the death list will prove to be large, despite the low figures at first given out.

Medical Examiner Frank S. Atwood announces that the search of the entire devastated district, under way today, will be made with special attention to the vicinity of the homes of those reported missing at the AMERICAN'S Information Bureau in Salem.

Dr. J. Paul Roulier, druggist and physician, of No. 12 Palmer street, Salem, is the latest prominent addition to the list of those thought to have perished.

Several fraternal organizations have prepared long lists of members of whom their officials have been able to find no trace.

Medical Examiner Atwood and Colonel Frank A. Graves today arranged for a large central morgue to which bodies of the dead, when recovered, could be taken.

Another serious phase of the conflagration became known when, in response to a communication from Salem that speculators were trying to cheat victims of their insurance, Governor Walsh ordered Insurance Commissioner Hardison to the stricken city to see what could be done to stop the operations of these men.

Secretary C. R. Sullivan of the Bureau of Trade, in his complaint to Governor Walsh, declared that a large group of so-called insurance speculators had descended upon the city and had bought or tried to buy assignments of insurance policies at rates from 75 to 85 per cent. below their face value.

In addition to sending Commissioner Hardison to Salem, Governor Walsh requested the office of the attorney-general to see whether any legal action could be taken.

Miss Katherine May Vinton of Stoneham, bride-to-be of Frank Palmer Speare. Photograph by Champaign Studio.

Frank Palmer Speare, director of the educational division of the Boston Y. M. C. A., will marry Miss Katherine May Vinton of Stoneham, despite the provision in his late wife's will cutting him off from sharing in her $72,000 estate in case he re-married. Speare would have received an income of $2,000 a year under the will. Here is what his wife said in her will about his re-marrying:

If, however, the said Frank P. Speare marries again, then it is my will that any further payments of said income or any part thereof to him shall then cease and that he shall no longer be interested in said trust estate, and in such event the whole of said income shall be then paid

EXPERTS AT WORK ON BOOKS GANGPANK

Isaac B. Maerston, treasurer of the Merchants & Manufacturers' Credit Company of No. 141 Devonshire street, is missing. Detectives representing stockholders in the company are trying to find him to find out in just what financial condition Maerston left the company.

Maerston has been living in Stoughton. The Merchants & Manufacturers' Credit Company formerly had offices at No. 49 State street, but recently moved to office No. 414 in the building at No. 151 Devonshire street.

At these offices the girl in charge stated today that Maerston was gone, was out in Stoughton or Boston. So one knew where he was, and it was believed he was suffering from a nervous breakdown somewhere. Henry A. Rumboldt, an expert investigator, is acting as manager until Maerston is found.

The credit company, it is declared, sold stock, and loaned out the proceeds to merchants and manufacturers. It was declared that the company has 24,000 stockholders. How much money Treasurer Maerston left in the treasury is not known.

Rumboldt was out of town today, going to the office.

One man was killed and three people were injured when the ropes attached to the steamer gangplank at the House Tunnel docks broke, a few minutes before the White Star liner Cymric sailed today, allowing the gangplank to swing down into the crowd.

The dead man was
HENRY COSGROVE, seventy-five, No. 248 Washington street.
The injured are

C. F. BENTON, No. 33 Park street, Wollaston, struck in body.
Mr. Congreve was at the pier to see out of his daughter, Mrs. H. W. Hildrop, sail for a trip abroad. He had been visiting another daughter at No. 22 Craigie street, Somerville, during the last few weeks.

The accident was a spectacular one. The pier was crowded with hundreds there to bid farewell to sailing friends.

The steamer gangplank was run out from the second story of the pier. This gangplank is a long one, hinged in the middle in such a way that the outer end hangs downward and does not rest on a ship.

It is usual to lift this steamer gangplank ten minutes before the ship sails. Today the signal was given, the ropes drew taut and the end of the gangplank rising on the liner drew into the air and fell back a little toward the pier.

It was at that moment the rope broke.

The thing thundered down. Landing at the huge, the section that had rested on the steamer swung downward in a killing blow. The lower floor of the pier was thronged with people, and the gangplank was just long enough to reach their shoulders.

The swinging plank struck the old man, Cosgrove, full force, and brushed him back into the crowd unconscious. Mrs. Mullin and Miss Rogers got the remaining force of the blow. Benton was struck on the shoulder.

RESUED TO HOSPITAL.
The crowd struggled to get back out of the way. Police rushed to clear the scene. Cosgrove and Mrs. Mullin were put in ambulances and started for the Relief Hospital. Cosgrove was dead when he arrived.

The crowd seemed to show the old man, Mrs. Mullin and Miss Rogers sympathy. They were white and pale. Mrs. Mullin was revived with difficulty. Mrs. Rogers moved easily. Cosgrove and Mrs. Mullin were put in ambulances and started for the Relief Hospital. Cosgrove was dead when he arrived.

Miss Rogers had come to the pier to see her friend Caroline Pierce sail. She was with a party who took her home.

Wife and Daughter of Clark Near Death

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of Speaker Clark, and his daughter, Miss Genevieve Clark, with a party from Fort Washington, were caught out in the River electric and rainstorm that swept the country round about Washington. Captain Granville Sawyer, commanding at Fort Washington, Md., took Mrs. Clark, Miss Clark, Representative McKellar of Tennessee and several persons from the fort down the river for a cruise in a small launch. The storm came up and almost captured the boat before the party could get ashore.

Arrest Shrewsbury Man for Pictures

WORCESTER, June 29.—Warren E. Board, aged forty-two, of Shrewsbury, a well-known Worcester business man, was held in Elkhart for a hearing Thursday by Judge Uley in the Central District Court today on a charge of having illegal pictures in his possession. A raid on his home in Shrewsbury resulted in the finding of over 160 plates of Worcester girls, said to have been made by Board.

House Kills Bill
For 70-Per Cent Gas

Representative Lewis F. Sullivan's bill to reduce the price of gas in Boston to 70 cents was killed in the House today. The rising vote was 41 to 44, and on a roll call the vote was 34 to 36. Representative Hays of Brighton led the opposition today, leading the record from Louis D. Brandeis, which protests against the passage of the bill. Representative Hays voted that the East Boston 20-cent gas bill will be vetoed.

Esterbrooks Get Big Boston Loan

A Boston bond issue amounting to $5,585,000 was today awarded in whole to Esterbrook & Co., seven associated houses, at a premium of $12.25 on the thousand. The association houses are a roll call by C. N. W. Harris & Co., Hildgett & Co., May Oldham & Co., Blake Brothers & Co., Parkinson, Burr & Co. and Curtis, Ranger & Co.

WAR SPIRIT IN AUSTRIA ROUSED BY TRAGEDY

SARAJEVO, Bosnia, June 30.—All Bosnia and Herzegovina are today aflame with hatred, kindled by the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, and his consort, the Duchess of Hohenberg, by a young Slav in this city on Sunday. In spite of the declaration of martial law there was rioting in this and other cities throughout the two provinces.

At Mostar, the chief city of Herzegovina, 200 Servians were massacred or wounded by Moslems.

The city is reported to have been set on fire by the rioting Servians and Moslems.

POLICE FIRE UPON MOB.
While preparations were being made here to ship the bodies of the two victims of Sunday's double assassination, a mobbed crowd of riotous Servians in this city broke up the funeral procession.

The military police fired upon the mob, but the infuriated men and women turned upon the gendarmes and drove them off, then continued their assault upon the buildings. Three Servians were caught and would have been lynched in the streets except for the soldiers, who upon being reinforced, returned to the scene with fixed bayonets and charged the rioters.

Servian shops and hotels were stoned and the windows smashed. Servian flags were torn down and trampled in the streets. Mobs made up of both men and women paraded the streets shouting "Death to the Servians."

"Down with the throwers of Balkan bombs!"

Servian and active Bosnian are being across the Danube.

At Neretva crowds of Mohammedans, Croats and Servians engaged

WOMAN HURT ON PIER MAY DIE.
Mrs. Bridget Mullin of 113 West Broadway, South Boston, one of the women who were injured today when the gang plank attached to the White Star liner Cymric at the House Tunnel docks broke and fell into the crowd, is at the Relief Hospital with her name on the dangerous list.

She went to the docks today to see her sister, who was to sail for Ireland on the Cymric. Mrs. Mullin went out today for the first time since the birth of a child, which occurred two weeks ago.

CALL SPECIAL JURY VENIRE IN ROBINSON CASE

A special venire of 300 jurymen received summonses from District Attorney Pelletier today to appear at the courthouse on July 20, when Lawrence Robinson, the Essex Street man, goes on trial before Judge Patton, sitting in the Superior Court, charged with slaying Inspector Thomas J. Norton.

Attorney Blanchard, counsel for Robinson, moved that the defense be allowed to file a motion attacking the indictment and asking for further time, and also that the attorney be allowed to withdraw his plea of not guilty.

Judge Keating granted the motion to allow counsel to file their motion at which time a special hearing will be held.

Joseph Duddy, Robinson's bail, will not be tried with Robinson as was expected. The case against him will be disposed of after the trial of Robinson.

Poll Inspector Thomas Lynch is in Grand Rapids today investigating Robinson's history. He was sent by Inspector McGarr after a conference with District Attorney Pelletier.

The prosecution is determined to go for evidence against Robinson. Already replies have been received from numerous cities showing where Robinson had been arrested and taken from the city by the police, owing to his reputation as a pick-pocket and gunman.

Repair Nebraska,
Damaged by Hitting
Rock in the Harbor

A force of men is at work today repairing the steel plates of the U. S. S. Nebraska, which were damaged when the vessel struck a rock outside of the channel buoy while coming up harbor in a fog, after a two month stay in Mexican waters.

The port channel buoy was mistaken for the starboard buoy, and when the Nebraska struck, the crew jumped to collision stations, and the big mast used on such was severely damaged, ready to put over. It was unnecessary, however, as the ship engines going full speed astern quickly backed the ship into the main channel.

REMARKABLE LIFE ROMANCE OF 'CHIP' ROBINSON, GUNMAN

CHAPTER II.

And thus, awaiting the blow upon the child that was to be, a violence which overrode the boundaries of liberty.

(The Fatal Gift)

The promise of happiness which marriage was supposed to mean for Jennie Robinson and her sweetheart was not to burn out for the young couple.

For a while it seemed as though everything would go well, especially when Jennie learned that a little one was expected.

But at the very time when affection between the couple should have been most deep and tender a bitter quarrel arose, resulting in violent hatred on Jennie's part of the man whom she formerly loved.

Smith left Washington Court-house abruptly and, extraordinary as it may seem, Jennie pursued him. She was, for some reason, imbued with an all-consuming passion for revenge for the manner in which her dream of happiness had been shattered.

According to the strange story which was whispered at the time through some of the families in the town, Jennie had actually seized a revolver and had practiced shooting until she was an expert marksman.

It was the product in the use of a weapon which most girls dread in connection with marriage.

NAMES HER SON LAWRENCE.

Armed with her revolver and with full cartridges—no one was to know of this—Jennie pursued her fugitive husband through the streets of Washington.

She failed to find him. Smith was never again in Ohio but later the news of his death in a Western State came to Washington Court-house.

Meanwhile, the expectant mother had returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Robinson.

There her child was born in 1887. The child was a boy, a small, healthy boy, with blue eyes and sandy hair, who gave every indication of strength and vigor.

The young mother was at first against the boy's father that she would even give him the letter "n" name. The boy was christened Lawrence Robinson, the last name being that of the mother's family.

But the father, who had been living with her parents, was not so easily satisfied. He had been living with her parents, was not so easily satisfied. He had been living with her parents, was not so easily satisfied.

After this betrovalment Mrs. McKitterick returned again to her parents' home. Washington Court-house for awhile. She resumed her maiden name, Robinson.

LAWRENCE A BARRING LAD.

Meanwhile, Lawrence, the boy, had been living with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Robinson. He developed marked mental and physical characteristics.

Physically he was admirable, a strong, daring lad, well-mannered, fond of fun, not overfond of study and quick and clever to possess a violent temper.

He was of a reserved turn of mind but was known to possess a violent temper. Recent developments in his life, which have rendered the said community of Washington Court-house, have served to recall the pursuing manner in which his mother drove him to a violent end and set out in pursuit of his father a few months later.

The deadly gun-play with Robinson is known to have occurred in Boston and the sensational shooting which he is accused in Michigan have brought to the mind of Washington Court-house the question of pre-natal influence.

It is recalled that the shooting of President Garfield by Guitas occurred not long before that. This may, it is argued, have put the idea of using a revolver into the mind of Lawrence Robinson's mother.

REVENGE DOMINATES LIFE.

But whether the Guitas weapon had sought to do with it or not, Jennie Robinson was practicing with a revolver and was becoming expert in its use during one of the most critical periods of her life and during the time when her manner of living was going to influence the nature of the child-to-be.

The thought of vengeance was regarded as almost an obsession with Jennie Robinson at that time. It dominated her entire life.

Many examples have been cited to show that pre-natal influence is not theory but an actual factor in the most striking cases of this in that of a woman who was moving a few months before one of her children was born.

The mother, after the family moved into the new home, superintended a great deal of the packing of house and furniture.

The baby, a girl, grew up with a marked passion for sewing a house clean. She would, as a little girl, take a dusting or any other odd job, a table or window pane or any surface she thought needed, with a marked perseverance.

The mother interpreted this characteristic of her child directly to the house-cleaning duties which occupied so much of her time and thought prior to the child's birth.

In the case of Jennie Robinson the result of the future mother's passion for the exclusion of almost every other idea, with the thought of revenge and punishment.

STARTS AS SHOE-WORKER.

She returned to her parents, to be sure, before the child was born, and had apparently become resigned to the breaking up of her home, but the hand Fate had been placed upon the life of the innocent child and it was "marked" as the good wives of the community believed—with a tried and true violence and aim.

In the early years Lawrence Robinson did not betray any marked tendency toward breaking beyond the usual childish scrapes. He was kept in grammar school and enjoyed himself with the other boys of the village to his heart's content.

It is not on record that he was ever very studious. Like the average grammar school boy, he studied because he had to. He would much rather be outdoors playing, or working, than sitting at his little desk.

Lawrence Robinson was adept in boys' games, his physique favored this, for one thing. He was easily picked out as a child who would, during accidents or sickness, grow tall and strong.

At the end of his grammar school education enough. Whatever his shortcomings or mother thought of it, the life will prevail. He enjoyed a full summer vacation and, at the age when boys usually enter high school, started out to find work.

Opportunities for good "jobs" were few in Washington Court-house. Finding nothing better, Lawrence entered a local shoe factory as an operative. But he never meant to stick there.

Mrs. Eddy Lived Long—Why?

We Print the Letter of Her Earnest Disciples and Our Own Opinion

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

On June 21 in an editorial in the Sunday American entitled "The Death of Enthusiasm" we mentioned some famous men and women whose lives were long, and said that those long lives were due to enthusiasm, a brain active to the last.

Among those to whom we referred as examples of long and useful life were Julia Ward Howe, the late Pope Leo, Moltke and Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the leader of the Christian Scientists.

We now receive a letter from those representing Mrs. Eddy's faith, and gladly give it conspicuous publicity.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATION
FOR THE STATE OF NEW YORK
1 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK

June 22, 1914.

Editor American:

Sir—In your editorial of June 21, entitled "The Death of Enthusiasm," you refer in a friendly way to Mary Baker Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science. You infer, however, that Mrs. Eddy accomplished what she did, "not because she was a Christian Scientist, but because she was an enthusiast." We do not exactly understand what you mean by this expression, but we do know that Mrs. Eddy could never have accomplished what she did except for the fact that she was a Christian Scientist.

The divine principle of this science was revealed to her at a time when she was suffering from an accident pronounced by physicians to be fatal, and she was instantly healed. This was in Mrs. Eddy's forty-fifth year, and it was Christian Science alone that made it possible for her to compare with us for nearly forty-five years more, to see Christian healing re-established throughout the civilized world.

In referring to his works, Jesus declared that to human mind these things were impossible, but that with the mind of God all things are possible.

Christian Science teaches mankind that the only real success is that which comes from right thinking and acting and that working from this basis man need not enjoy health, happiness and success, but lives in the assurance that they can never be taken from him.

Sincerely yours,
RSR
CCH
COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATION.

To give respectful publication to this communication is a pleasant duty.

The writer of the editorial referred to, however, believes that the great power in Mrs. Eddy, as in all successful leaders, was ENTHUSIASM, mind with energy and will outwitting the body.

It is very interesting to learn that in Mrs. Eddy's forty-fifth year physicians pronounced her condition hopeless, and that she was instantly healed and lived—and she did—to be almost ninety.

Still we maintain that it was the power of enthusiasm, will and hope, planted in the mind of man a thousand centuries before Christian Science was heard of, that made Mrs. Eddy a wonderful old woman, able to talk to this writer with power and absolute mental clearness just before she died.

If the Christian Science Committee on Publication will look up the life of Lodovico Gormaro they will find that he, too, was given up to die by the physicians when young.

And he lived to be older than Mrs. Eddy—ninety-nine years of age—and wrote important works when past ninety.

He was interested when the doctors told him that he must die and made up his mind that he would not die. He lived, without having heard of Christian Science. But he ate and drank with extreme temperance, as the Christian Scientists usually do. He probably believed that it was his theories of diet that made him live almost a century. We believe that in this case determination had a great deal to do with it.

This world and the human race are very old. The scientists declare, and with authority far exceeding that of the jumble of religious teachers, that radium and kindred substances have required at least TWO HUNDRED MILLION YEARS for development on this planet. Men have lived here half a million years at least, undoubtedly.

And from the beginning they have possessed one great spiritual quality, ENTHUSIASM, mental courage that has kept them alive and made them live to be old and useful.

The belief of the Christian Scientist is that the truth has always existed as to the possibility of healing. It was revealed nineteen hundred years ago, then lost, and again revealed through Mrs. Eddy.

That may be. We do not discuss or contradict religious belief—we know that from the beginning great power for healing and work has been put by the just government of the universe in every living creature. And that power is will or enthusiasm.

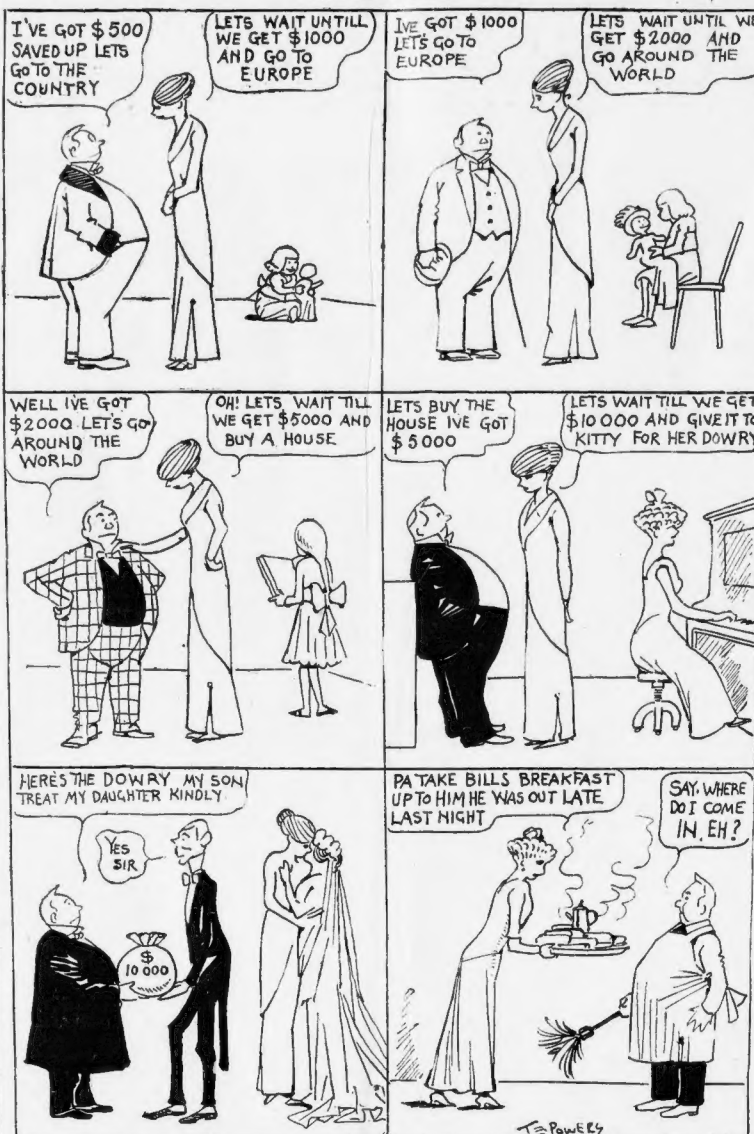

Questions Answered

THE WEALTH OF MEXICO
J. H. H.—In natural wealth Mexico is one of the most favored of all the lands of the earth. Its resources are little short of marvelous. In gold, silver and the various precious stones its possibilities are tremendous. It is rich in petroleum. Its forests are immensely rich. Its agricultural possibilities are scarcely to be estimated, so great are they. In all the elements of natural wealth the country leads all others. As regards climate, Mexico, in its higher regions, is a paradise; and after what has been achieved at Panama, it is safe to say that even the most remote regions may be made perfectly wholesome and safe.

THE TERM "JEWISH"
T. Y. Z.—You ask if the term "Jewish" applies to both nationality and religion, or just to religion; and if a Jew who is converted to Christianity is still considered a Jew. Of course, the Jew who is converted to Christianity ceases to be a Jew in faith, though he may be of necessity remain a Jew in race, that is to say, a Hebrew. "Jew" is a nickname. "Hebrew" is the proper title for the descendants of Abraham, while "Israelite" is the word that applies more particularly to the faith; the true Israelite being the Hebrew, who in addition to being a Jew, has the old Hebrew faith.

LIBERTY AND THE COLOSSEUS
G. R. T.—There is very little difference in height between Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor and the Colosseum in Rome. The Colosseum is only fifty feet high. The Statue of Liberty is only fifty feet high. But this is the larger estimate for the ancient figure. According to some statements the Colosseum was only thirty feet high.

Without Fear of Successful Contradiction

Quite Likely.
The President says he has received many letters whose writers have noticed no diminution in prosperity. Maybe one of them is from Mr. Bryan.

That Would Satisfy 'Em
If Bryan is so terribly sorry for Colombia, why doesn't he give that country the receipts of the Comstock for a year, or a benefit Chastatanga performance?

It Works the Wrong Way
If General Funston would come up and live in this country a while he would give up the idea of bringing down the cost of living in Vera Cruz by declaring free trade.

What One Speech Did

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

It is doubtful if a greater oratorical triumph was ever witnessed than that won by Flaher Ames in the House of Representatives at Washington one hundred and eighteen years ago.

The wonderful speech was called forth by the proposed appropriations for the fortification of the "Jay Treaty," a bit of diplomacy that was at the time the "paramount issue" with the American people.

The Jay Treaty was immensely unpopular with the masses, and the excitement of the country ran high. The feeling against England, very bitter to begin with, was intensified a hundredfold by the terms of the treaty, which were looked upon as being most humiliating to the proud young Republic.

Anybody Can See It
Do you notice the wave of psychological prosperity which is sweeping over the country?

The Jealous Wife—This Trait Is Nothing
Than a Disease, and Could Be Cured
Specialists

By ELLIS WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

"If you will stop and consider the subject dispassionately and honestly you will find only a handful of married women who are not miserable because of their jealousy."

Every time the husband of the average middle-aged woman looks at a younger woman, every time he pays a meaningless compliment, or shows a gallant impulse, she is devoured by jealousy. It is the law of the sex and the age. Only women who have some object or occupation to which their passion, or women who have gallanties of their own, or women who have settled into a pigtail tendency to sit and sleep life away and have lost all sentiment, are exempt from jealousy."

It was a brilliant man of wide experience and large outlook on life who spoke thus, and the woman to whom he spoke was not able to dispute his statement. Let the statement be modified, and this can be said with truth of the subject, that where there is a woman, there is a man with jealousy fifty years ago, there is a man now.

Because women's narrow horizons have enlarged and her view extended and her occupations have grown more numerous and her education has advanced into new fields of thought.

Long ago, when a woman's life was bounded by four walls and when her most exciting occupation during an absence of her husband was to lean over an embroidery frame and dream of his return, and when her mental recreation was in perusing a romance of a deceived woman who died of a broken heart, jealousy was much more rampant in the feminine nature than it is today.

Perhaps when driven was more difficult jealousy was more acute. The knowledge that escape is possible when a situation becomes intolerable acts as a salve to the jealousy wounded hearts of some types of women. And there can be no question that mental development and varied occupations for the mind are also a cure of jealousy.

Jealousy Often Caused by Depreciation of One's Self

Jealousy is often caused by self depreciation, induced by unthinking parents who destroy the peace of mind of a daughter in a crude effort to prevent her from becoming vain. If a young woman is continually made to think herself unattractive and to regard others as her superiors in charm, jealousy is a natural sequence.

When parents, teachers and guardians of the young will endeavor to give a young girl points by assuring her of and adding her to the possession of grace, youthful attractiveness, respectful manners and loveliness, and then direct her mind toward the attainment of all the mental and moral qualities which constitute a winsome womanhood.

The girl who is forever dissatisfied with her appearance and who regards herself as plain, uninteresting and without magnetism, is sure to be miserable and sure to overestimate the attractions of others. When she marries it requires much consolation for her to be torn with unreasoning jealousy.

A little happy vanity is a wholesome trait for any woman to possess. The Puritan precepts which exalted stern virtues and exalted beauty as an unnecessary and dangerous asset for womanhood made excellent fertilizer for the soil of jealousy.

Lack of Thought Brings Jealousy on Occasional

It is natural and right and wise for both husband and wife to have their separate interests, pursuits and friends. It keeps life fresh and wards off the possible approach of monotony and ennui.

The husband's club, the wife's club, the college associations, the church, the social life, the various interests, should all be kept separate for the later enjoyment of the pleasures found in the domestic life.

When a husband or wife or both feel a jealousy of the separate pleasures it is usually because of the lack of confidence and intimacy which should exist between them.

This was, undoubtedly, a fatal error. The husband's club, the wife's club, the college associations, the church, the social life, the various interests, should all be kept separate for the later enjoyment of the pleasures found in the domestic life.
